James accepts instructions across a broad range of Chambers' areas of expertise, with a particular focus on group litigation, competition law, and commercial disputes.

James welcomes instructions as sole advocate or as a member of a team of advocates and has extensive experience of working in each capacity. For example, James is currently instructed as part of a team of barristers in commercial and competition disputes and has recently appeared in his own right in proceedings before the High Court and various County Courts. James also has experience of being led in the Court of Appeal and in arbitral proceedings.

Before joining Chambers, James worked as an employed barrister at Herbert Smith Freehills LLP where he gained experience of complex and high value group litigation (often with an international dimension) and non-contentious economic and business regulatory work.

Group Actions

James is regularly instructed in group litigation, including collective proceedings before the Competition Appeal Tribunal and CPR Part 19 proceedings before the High Court.

James' experience traverses a wide variety of issues that arise in group cases, including jurisdiction disputes, applicable law issues, generic and specific pleadings, complexities in managing disclosure and expert evidence, and preliminary issue hearings. Further, and unusually for a barrister of his call, through his prior role as an employed barrister at HSF, James has considerable experience of working directly with large international clients to devise and implement commercially focused case strategies in group action contexts.

James is also comfortable advising on group actions concerning personal injuries, having frequently advised on personal injury issues at start of his career.

James is currently co-authoring a chapter for the latest edition of Hodges on Multi-Party Actions.

Commercial

James is frequently instructed in commercial cases. In particular, James has advised on and/or appeared in court in cases concerning:

- Breach of contract
- Variation of contract
- Disputes following the sale of a business
- Misrepresentation
- Deceit
- Jurisdiction disputes
- Applicable law issues
- Duress
- Challenges to arbitral awards
- Financial services and insurance regulation

James welcomes instructions across the full range of commercial disputes.

Consumer

James is often instructed in consumer cases, including those arising under the Consumer Rights Act 2015, the Consumer Protection from Unfair Trading Regulations 2008, and the Consumer Credit Act 1974.

Among other things, (i) James has advised on and appeared in consumer actions concerning misrepresentation, (ii) James has advised an international business on aspects of UK advertising law and potential liability to consumers, and (iii) James has represented lenders in disputes concerning ss.140A-C of the Consumer Credit Act 1974.

Insurance and Professional Liability

James accepts instructions in insurance disputes, insurance advisory work and professional liability disputes. By way of example:

- James has acted (led) for an insurer in arbitral proceedings concerning a coverage dispute.
- James has acted (led) in a complex and high value professional negligence dispute in the High Court.
- James has appeared as sole counsel in a professional disciplinary appeal in the High Court.
- James has experience preparing pleadings in insurance coverage disputes and professional liability disputes.
- James has advised on issues including subrogation and aggregation, the interpretation of provisions in insurance contracts, and legal issues around the quantification of recoverable loss.

Additionally, whilst an employed barrister at HSF, James advised on competition law issues arising from the proposed acquisition of a major international (re)insurance broker by another major international (re)insurance broker, which resulted in a Phase II merger investigation. Through this experience, James became closely familiar with the insurance sector and the commercial objectives of (re)insurers and their brokers.

Employment

James has experience appearing in the Employment Tribunal and has strong knowledge of employment law having studied the subject to master's degree level. James welcomes instructions in this area.
