Health & Safety

Tim is widely acknowledged by Chambers UK and Legal 500 as being one of the Bar's leaders in health and safety work. He has been instructed in one of the most complex and serious investigations concerning corporate manslaughter and gross negligence manslaughter ever undertaken, arising from the Grenfell Tower fire, as well as the full spectrum of HSWA offences across a range of sectors. Tim often advises very large corporate clients on the health and safety aspects of high value commercial disputes where timely advice and commercial sensitivity are paramount. Tim was shortlisted for Health & Safety Silk of the Year 2023 in the Chambers Bar Awards and has been consistently ranked in band 1/tier I by Chambers UK and the Legal 500 for his health & safety practice. He is also the only KC ranked for this work on the Midlands Circuit.

Over the last three years Tim has defended or prosecuted over 30 cases arising from death or serious injury at work. He also has an extensive advisory practice assisting very private and public undertakings on the application of health & safety law in the context of commercial disputes. Tim has specific experience of health & safety law applied to the following sectors:

- Agricultural – working at height; use of specialised machinery.
- Construction – numerous investigations arising from falls from height; asbestos exposure; electrocution whilst conducting roof work; collapsed buildings.
- Defence – advice and representation in the context of large commercial dispute arising from alleged defects in safety of tanks and armoured vehicles.

Environment

Tim has been recognised as one of the UK’s leading advocates in environmental law since he successfully appeared for the defence in the leading environmental case of EA v Thorn International [2008] EWHC 2595 (Admin). In 2012 he was appointed to the Attorney General’s “A Panel” of approved regulatory counsel. Tim has been ranked by Chambers UK as a leader in this field for 14 years and in silk has an extensive advice practice working for very large public and private undertakings on all aspects of environmental law, regulatory compliance and enforcement with particular emphasis on the waste, nuclear and biofuels industries. He has particular expertise in the use of civil sanctions and POCA in the context of alleged infringements of environmental law.

In the last 10 years he has received instructions to advise and defend many of the UK’s largest environmental concerns and their directors in all aspects of environmental enforcement including:

- Pre-action advice and submissions to the Agency by a leading UK soil manufacturer.
- Advice and representation to various London Boroughs engaged in high value civil litigation arising from a contractual dispute with large environmental concern.
